

Ventilating Chambers.

Warming, lighting and ventilating dwellings and public edifices are worthy of careful study. How can these things be cheaply and effectually done? They are closely connected with each other. Ventilation is really the most important, and yet it is more often neglected than either of the others. The air of any room or dwelling may be ventilated in so many ways that the subject of ventilation cannot be too well understood by mothers. They are the house-physicians, and should do all they can to bestow health and comfort on those who are committed to their charge. They should realize the fact that vitiated air is constantly, by day and night, exuded from the skin, passing from the lungs in so large quantities that proper ventilation is the cheapest way of obtaining a sufficient supply of vital air.

The amount of effluvia exuding from the skin is much greater than most persons may suppose; and the quantity of carbonic gas that every human being daily exhales is enormous. And what is of some importance to know and consider is that it chiefly consists of waste that should not remain within the limits of the skin, nor should it be again absorbed, to vitiate the blood and tissues. It is imperative that all foul effluvia from the lungs or skin should be constantly passing from the system, and be as constantly replaced by pure air, that may improve instead of impair the health.

The difficulty in ventilating dwellings, to exchange foul air for fresh in such a way as to do no harm, is that which may arise from chilling draughts and sudden changes of temperature. How much fresh air must be admitted into a living room, for any given number of human beings, is a question that depends for answer on the number of inmates, their occupation and state of health. It is plain enough that the amount of vitiated air depends upon the amount of respiration and perspiration—upon the quantity of waste that exercise may expel.

Some scientists, whose experiments and observations are worthy of all trust, have reported that each person in a room should have 1,000 cubic feet of air; or, a room ten feet square and ten feet high. A school-room forty feet in length, ten in height and forty in width, must hold 16,000 cubic feet of air, or air enough for sixteen persons. Now, many school-rooms have these dimensions, and still contain forty scholars. The amount of fresh air really needed to prevent an undue accumulation of waste from the skin and lungs should be 48,000 cubic feet per hour. This amount of fresh air ought to be so admitted into the school-room as to prevent harmful and unpleasant draughts. Are any of our school-rooms so constructed as to secure this needed amount of fresh air? We have measured several school-rooms in Chicago, and have never found that they were so arranged as to yield these results. Many school-rooms do not approximate it. The results generally are that the schools have been in session in winter hardly an hour before the windows must be raised, and draughts of chilling air be admitted to strike the heads and shoulders of the inmates.

Similar remarks may be truly made regarding bed-rooms. Physicians often have occasion to observe that the ventilation of sleeping-rooms is still too much neglected, even by the respectable and cleanly; and when called to visit servants in the night, the need of ventilation is strongly and strikingly illustrated. The servants are not to blame, or, at least, not always. Their beds are usually placed in low attics that have no means of ventilation, so that, by the early morning hours, if not before the crowing of chanticleer, the air they are inhaling is outrageously offensive. Physicians too often observe, also, that in the sleeping rooms of the poor and ignorant hardly 200 cubic feet are allowed for the inmates. No doubt ignorance of the ill results of breathing vitiated air is one cause of what we often smell. Every housekeeper should allow the standard space of 1,000 cubic feet for each person sleeping within his dwelling. In two or more previous essays we have referred to this subject of ventilation of bed-rooms. We, ourselves, never retire to rest without first opening a window ten to thirty inches, and then keep it open until we rise to prepare for the duties of the day.

A cheap and effective way of ventilating a sleeping room is to place a half-inch board, six inches wide, below the lower sash. Fit it to each shoulder of the window frame. In this way the outer air will pass freely between the upper part of the lower sash and the lower part of the upper sash. If this arrangement does not admit fresh air enough, pull down the upper sash an inch or two, but this is rarely necessary. —Prairie Farmer.

—Oscar Wilde ran across a lynching at Bonfouca, La. A negro assailant of a white woman had been taken out of jail by a mob, and Oscar saw the hanging from a car window. The negro was a preacher, and his wild, eloquent appeals for mercy moved the aesthetic traveller greatly, but did not affect the lynchers, who quickly suspended him from a railroad bridge.

Kendall's Spavin Cure.

The Most Successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain it effects a cure and does not blister. READ PROOF BELOW.

From Rev. P. N. GRANGER,

Presiding Elder of the St. Albans District.

ST. ALBANS, VT., Jan. 20, 1880.
DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gentls:—In reply to your letter I will say that my experience with 'Kendall's Spavin Cure' has been very satisfactory indeed. Three or four years ago I procured a bottle of your agent, and with it, cured a horse of lameness caused by a spavin. Last season my horse became very lame and I turned him out for a few weeks when he became better, but when I put him on the road he grew worse, when I discovered that a ring-bone was forming, I procured a bottle of Kendall's Spavin Cure and with less than a bottle cured him so that he is not lame, neither can the bunch be found. Respectfully yours,

P. N. GRANGER.

Perseverance Will Tell.

STROUGHTON, MASS., March 16, 1880.

B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gentls:—In justice to you and myself, I think I ought to let you know that I have removed two bone spavins with 'Kendall's Spavin Cure,' one very large one, don't know how long the spavin had been there, I have owned the horse eight months. It took me four months to take the large one off and two for the small one. I have used ten bottles. The horse is entirely well, with all stiff, and no bunch to be seen or felt. This is a wonderful medicine. It is a new thing here, but if it does for all what it has done for me it will be very great.

Respectfully yours, CHAS. E. PARKER.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE is sure in its effects, mild in its action as it does not blister, yet it is penetrating and powerful to reach a every deep seated pain or to remove any bony growth or other enlargement, such as spavins, splints, curbs, callous, sprains, swellings, any lameness and all enlargements of the joints or limbs, or rheumatism in man and for any purpose for which a liniment is used for man or beast. It is now known to be the best liniment for man ever used, acting mild and yet certain in its effects.

Send address for Illustrated Circular which we think gives positive proof of its virtues. No remedy has ever met with such unequalled success to our knowledge, for best as well as man.

Price $1. per bottle, or six bottles for $5. ALL Druggists have it or can get it for you or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors. DR. B. J. KENDALL & CO. Enosburgh Falls, Vermont. j27d.
